WHEREAS, COLT was organized to provide a unified advocacy base on all issues affecting tribes that govern large trust bases and that strive to ensure the most beneficial use of those lands for tribes and individual Indian landowners; and

WHEREAS, over the past several years, several COLT member tribes have found that the lack of high-capacity electric transmission lines on and near their reservations has become a barrier to the tribes' efforts to develop their energy resources and pursue other economic development projects; and

WHEREAS, securing upgrades to the national power grid to bring high-capacity electric transmission lines, and the means to fund and finance them, requires extensive advocacy before federal and state agencies and legislatures, active involvement in industry-wide transmission planning, and relationship-building with industry stakeholders; and

WHEREAS, establishing a COLT Tribal Energy Transmission Committee would allow tribes to build consensus and speak with an effective, unified voice in advocating for, and implementing policies and programs that bring high-capacity electric transmission lines to tribal lands so that tribes may pursue energy and economic development to the fullest extent the tribes desire.
